Freed at least momentarily from the specter of electrical shutdowns and Red Flag warnings, Kensington residents hiked, listened to great music, bought books and food, and celebrated our village past and present. The events slated for Sunday, October 13, began much earlier, as Kensington Community Council and Arlington Community Church volunteers prepared for the parade/picnic and Blessing of the Animals to be held Sunday, October 13. Then add the many afternoon hours that Friends of the Kensington Library spent gathering, pricing, and organizing the books for the FKL book sale.

Sunday dawned mild and sunny, with a slight cooling wind that reminded people that fall had arrived. Just as the Farmers Market at Colusa Circle began to roar, over twenty people met Rodney and Sarah Paul and others involved in advocating public ownership of the public paths. Contra Costa Supervisor John Gioia joined the group as it began a walk through lower Kensington, traversing paths that were established in the 1920s and '30s. The paths perform so many functions: shortcuts through our winding turns, exits in case of roadblocks during emergencies, wildlife corridors away from cars. As Rodney Paul pointed out, using a needed throat mike, as Kensington was developed, the first houses were built along the paths.

Pathkeepers member Lisa Caronna (kensingtonpathkeepers.org), writes by email: "Rodney Paul was an amazing guide, reporting on the history of the region, the development of Kensington, the oldest houses along the route, and of course the paths and the issues facing our community leading to the need for public ownership. John Gioia was a wealth of information on the history of the paths and the county."

At the same time, up at the Kensington Library, the fall book sale attracted a large group of buyers. People walked off with file boxes full of books donated by residents to fund the FKL, which purchases library books and puts on programs at the library for adults and children.

Writes FKL's Jim Fisher, "Business was brisk at the cashier tables, and volunteers and shoppers alike were clearly happy to have a place to browse and catch up with neighbors. Gross receipts were higher than for past Fall Sales, though below what they were ten years ago. Such a comparison, however, does not reflect the FKL's growing

Parade and Picnic Takes a Village—and Lots of Dogs

By Anne Forrest

Kensington's Parade and Picnic and the Blessing of the Animals shared Kensington Park's big field on a beautiful fall day as the Blue Angels flew in the distance. Leading the parade were KFD fire engines and Grand Marshal Arlington Community Church's Reverend Nate Klug, his wife, and young daughter. After arriving at the park, Reverend Nate switched gears to perform the Blessing of the Animals in the tradition of Francis of Assisi. At least two-dozen dogs and their owners were on hand to participate in this tradition.

The party continued with Tiffany Carrico leading the excellent Korematsu Middle School Jazz Band while people lined up to be served lunch by KCC board members and Kensington Hilltop's Dad's Club. Girl Scouts from troops #30189 and #33556 sold beautifully decorated homemade cookies and cupcakes. Community groups such as the Kensington Improvement Club, the ACC, Kensington Public Safety Council, Kensington fire board, Kensington 360, and Therapy Pets answered questions and passed out literature around the themes of human and animal safety and care.

At 1:30pm everyone turned their attention to the middle of the field where Officer Michael Brown and his K9 partner, Odin, demonstrated how Odin was trained and what it looks like when a dog is commanded to engage with a suspect. The crowd was visibly impressed with Odin's precision training. The officers were nice enough to stick around and answer many questions asked by children and adults.

Letters to the Editor

We Need Solutions First

Dear Editor:

The Kensington Property Owners Association (KPOA) board does not support the preliminary space plan by RossDrulisCusenbery Architecture Inc., which is part of the assessment to determine the feasibility of renovating the Public Safety Building (PSB). That plan calls for the displacement of our police from a renovated PSB.

Co-location of fire and police operations has served the community well due to a central location and ability to coordinate. There are limited options for relocating the PSB to another site, and the KPPCSD has yet to identify options for relocation. Both departments are required to be located in buildings meeting the "essential services building" code, which adds substantial construction cost. Kensington property owners would have to cover these unbudgeted, unforeseen costs to construct a new police headquarters.

Given the identified space requirements of the fire department, the police department can no longer expect to retain its present PSB space allocation. KPPCSD must reassess the police department's future space needs and work in concert with KFPD and the architect to identify the minimum space required for police operations to remain in a renovated PSB.

The current committee structure between KFPD and KPPCSD is inadequate to resolve the co-location of fire and police in a renovated PSB. There is not full transparency in the discussions between the board's representatives. We urge the boards' building committees to meet jointly in conformance with the open meeting act (Brown Act)—to hold all discussions in public about planning, design, and financing for the PSB. Critical decision points for both districts need to be discussed openly. For instance, the KPPCSD is currently determining how to provide best police services within realistic constraints. It seems only reasonable to await that determination before a decision on renovating the PSB is made.

KPOA urges both districts to continue working on a solution that will allow, at a minimum, both the fire and police departments to occupy a renovated PSB. Such a solution is in the best interest of both districts and, most important, in the best interest of the Kensington community.

David Spath, KPOA president

Dollars and Sense

Dear Editor:

The Kensington Fire Protection District board appears determined to spend taxpayer money on changes to the Public Safety Building (PSB) that will provide no community benefits at considerable community expense. Over the past four months the fire board has authorized $115,000 for concept drawings to convert the existing 5,800 sq. ft. PSB from a combined fire/police station to an enlarged 6,300 sq. ft. fire only station. If completed, the second floor living quarters for the three firefighters will increase from about 1,800 sf to 2,500 sf—larger than many Kensington homes. The expansion will include a 400 sq. ft. fitness center, three bathrooms, and an expanded dining and living room. The downstairs will include a conference room for eight people and three very large offices.

The estimated cost for this conversion will be $5.0 million with construction starting next year. Additionally, both fire and police will need to find temporary quarters during construction that could add $1.0 million to the project. These are just the costs tied to the PSB and do not include the costs of finding a new police station versus possibly contracting out police services. A new police station will be very expensive and time-consuming

Restoring Kensington's Fire Station is Essential

By Larry Nagel and Don Dommer, KFPD board directors

In the October issue of the Outlook, KFPD directors Julie Stein and Don Dommer presented a history of the events that have led the Kensington Fire Protection District (KFPD) to renovate the existing Kensington Public Safety Building, which is owned and operated by the KFPD. After renovation, the building will house only KFPD fire personnel and equipment, and the Kensington police department will be relocated to other quarters yet to be determined.

The purpose of the renovation is to make Station 65 adhere to “essential facility standards,” seismic criteria aimed at a building that will remain operational following a major disaster such as an earthquake. The current building does not meet current standards, is situated between one active fault that runs along the Arlington and one likely trace fault under the retaining wall behind the building, and most likely would not survive an earthquake with an intensity of 7 or more. When renovation is complete, Kensington Station 65 will be the only “essential facility standards” building in Kensington and will play a major role in emergency operations.

Renovating the PSB is essential. In a major disaster, the building may be compromised at the very time that the community needs it most. A decision to retrofit and remodel is not optimal but is the only option presently available. From a seismic standpoint, remodeling can strengthen the existing facility to the required standard; the fire board determined and communicated several years ago that a remodeled building cannot house both districts that now use the building.

Challenges of the Renovation

The journey to arrive at renovating Kensington Station 65 has been long and arduous. The KFPD retained the services of RossDrulisCusenbery Architecture Inc. (RDC) to develop design proposals for upgrading or replacing the building in 2016. The board reengaged RDC to build upon its prior work, now focusing solely on analyzing the feasibility of renovating and retrofitting the PSB within the existing footprint. RDC produced a seismic structural analysis and a preliminary conceptual plan suitable for cost estimating. This analysis must also report on the cost of temporarily relocating fire services and living quarters during the renovation. RDC identified the following that must be addressed besides it not meeting the Essential Facility Code:

- The building is out of compliance with the California Building Code (CBC) accessibility requirements, which require equal access for all members of the public.
- Roofing is more than twenty years old, is breaking down, and needs to be replaced.
- HVAC equipment is twenty years old and fails to meet current CBC Mechanical Code.
- Fire personnel dorm rooms, which are viewed in the CBC as a hotel function, do not have required HVAC systems.
- The building does not have a solar panel system, which could be considered.
- Electrical upgrades may be necessary to meet current CBC codes.
- A fire sprinkler system should be added.
- The KFPD administrative office must be moved to the ground floor to meet current CBC Chapter 11B Accessibility and avoid the requirement to install an elevator.
- The overhead doors result in a low clearance of only a few inches.

In addition, RDC identified several functional needs that must be addressed in the renovation:

- Determining CBC upgrades associated restrooms and showers upstairs and on the first floor, kitchen and dining room, day room, exercise room, and dorms.
- Determining whether KFPD captain's office, firefighters workstations, and other spaces should be moved to the ground floor.
- Making the conference and training space larger.
- The bays that house our two fire engines are narrow, which reduces response time because fire personnel have to open and close the engine doors to board the engine.
- Some functions are co-located with utilities.

Where We Are Starting From

On the first floor, two apparatus bays house Engine 65 and Engine 365 in extremely tight quarters. The third bay is used to perform necessary functions related to fire and emergency services, including storage of turnout gear for the firefighters and a shop for repairing and servicing equipment. The training room serves public safety meeting functions for fire and police. It is used for joint command meetings, interviewing victims or witnesses; it is also used for meetings with district directors and the public. The training room is accessible only through a shared hallway and is not securely segregated from police department spaces. This floor does not contain an ADA-compliant restroom for staff and the public.

On the second floor, two offices are used by police personnel, and the remainder of this floor is used by fire personnel for living quarters and the office for the KFPD district manager. One shift of three fire personnel lives in this space during its 48-hour shift (there are three groups of personnel). Because this space is presently shared with fire administration staff and with the police, compliance with ADA accessibility requires the installation of an elevator and ADA-compliant restrooms. Firefighter workstations are situated in dorm rooms. The fitness room is co-located with the electrical and IT equipment. A shared hallway serves fire, police, and administration, and is the sole access route for firefighters responding to an emergency. This floor also contains a room housing the emergency generator and radio equipment for KARO/ECHO to use in an emergency.

What the Renovation Will Do

Figures 1 and 2 show the first and second story floor plans for the renovated fire station. Although space is extremely tight, these plans do address most of the shortcomings of the present facility for the fire department. On the first floor, three apparatus bays have been replaced by two wider bays to house Engine 65 and Engine 365, allowing more space around engines for easier maintenance of equipment. The third apparatus bay has been converted into a workshop and room for storing turnout equipment, and a decontamination room required by new firehouse standards to clean turnout gear to remove fire-related chemicals that might be hazardous to the firefighter. The training room has been expanded so that it also can function as a Department Operations Center (DOC) in case of a major emergency as mandated by the new Emergency Operations Plan. The KFPD district manager's office, captain's office, and watch office have been moved from the second floor to the first floor to satisfy public access requirements. The restroom for staff and the public will be upgraded to be ADA-compliant.

The second floor is used only for the living quarters for fire personnel, thus eliminating the ADA requirement for an elevator and ADA-compliant restrooms. Firefighter workstations

Comparing Stations

Two-story fire stations are common in denser and more urban areas. Most single crew stations with shifts of a captain and two firefighters have two or three drive-through apparatus bays. These stations range in area from 7,000 SF with limited amenities up to 10,000 SF for a more generous space that includes conference rooms or a battalion chief on the shift. The average-sized single crew fire station is approximately 8,000 SF. Kensington's PSB is a two-story building with 1,200 SF allocated to police and KPPCSD administration and 4,400 SF allocated to KFPD for fire apparatus, fire personnel, and administration. The total building area, including utility space, is 5,800 SF. Both agencies are undersized by 50 percent or more. It is not uncommon for municipalities to elect to house fire protection services separately from police protection services.

Please plan to attend the open house tour of the Public Safety Building on November 9 from 10am-noon and the KFPD public meeting on November 16 from 9am-11am at the Arlington Community Church.

Navellier Steps Down as KFPD Manager

By Janice Kosel

On October 31, Brenda Navellier is stepping down as the half-time manager of the Kensington Fire Protection District. In 2009 she began working half time for Kensington and half time for the El Cerrito Fire Department. She has done an outstanding job during her twenty years of public service. Brenda is a native of the Bay Area. She and her husband Guy live in El Cerrito—on Navellier Street! They have two grown children. Before joining the KFPD, she worked at an architectural firm in Oakland. The KFPD will hire a search firm to help find her replacement. All agree that Brenda will be a very tough act to follow. We wish her well.

Astrophysicist Speaks on Global Warming

By Leslie Moorjani

Kensington will host noted astrophysicist, author, and lecturer Dr. Jeffrey Bennett on November 5, 7pm, at Arlington Community Church. In his talk, "Global Warming Demystified," Dr. Bennett will tackle some of the toughest issues surrounding global warming, demonstrating how we can (and must) move beyond partisanship in addressing these complex problems.

Dr. Bennett is the lead author of best-selling college textbooks on astronomy, astrobiology, mathematics, and statistics. His numerous books have sold more than 1.5 million copies. One of Jeffrey Bennett's most visible achievements has been his work to develop educational scale models of the solar system. One such model, the Voyage Scale Model Solar System, has been installed at the National Mall in Washington, DC. The event, sponsored by Person of the Planet, is free to the community.

Passings

On August 29, 2019, longtime Kensington resident Sharon Louise (Talbot) Beaucage died unexpectedly at her second home in Chester, CA. She is survived by her son Nicolas Beaucage of Kensington, whom she loved dearly. Sharon, the only child of Robert and Cleo Talbot, was born in Washington, DC on September 23, 1942. A veteran of the Navy, she moved to Kensington in the 1970s, working for the Oakland A's as the team photographer during their championship years and later for the Navy as a civilian.

Photography was not just her profession; it was her passion. Her many friends remember her fondly as the enthusiastic chronicler of their lives. Her ever-present camera captured decades of celebrations, holidays, hot air balloon races, Sierra ski trips, and the school milestones of her son Nick and his classmates from Skytown Preschool through college. For several years, Sharon took the annual town photograph of college-bound Hilltop Elementary alumni.

Sharon was fun-loving and adventurous. In her fifties she completed AIDS/LifeCycle from San Francisco to Los Angeles. In her sixties she took a six-month solo road trip exploring America in her RV. Sharon loved bluegrass music and for many years was a regular at the Strawberry Music Festival in Camp Mather.

Sharon's kindness and creativity brought joy to all who knew her. She is deeply missed by those whose lives she touched in Kensington, Chester, and throughout the US. Above all, she will be remembered as a steadfast, loving friend and mother.

West Wing Reboot

By Sylvia Hacaj

Given today's headlines, many of us might wish for a reboot of West Wing, the TV series that became a ratings juggernaut. This progress report is about a "reboot" of the Kensington Community Center's west wing—actually the southwest wing, to be precise. The structural steel columns for the new portico have been delivered and installed. Once completed, the overhang will offer shelter from sun and rain while people wait to pick up children from afterschool classes or chat after gatherings.

The structural work at the roof is finished. After inspection, the rest of the roof work will progress. On October 8, El Cerrito's Sunshine Gutter arrived at the site with a seven-inch fascia gutter machine. It unspooled sheet metal and formed five gutters right on the spot, in lengths spanning 20-57 inches, just shy of the maximum length of five feet. The gutters were installed the next day. The contractor has also started rerouting the irrigation lines in preparation for grading and paving work. Electrical and mechanical work continues, and the project is still on track to finish in January.

Fire Contract Signed

On October 12, an open house complete with cake celebrated the renewal of the ten-year contract with El Cerrito to provide EMT and fire services to Kensington. Fire board directors Julie Stein and Larry Nagel flank departing district manager Brenda Navellier. Photo by Sylvia Hacaj.

to complete, while contracting out will raise significant community debate.

Since the PSB was constructed almost fifty years ago the fire department has occupied about seventy percent of the space and the police thirty percent. This has served the community well, and even the El Cerrito fire chief is not advocating for an expansion of the fire department. The fire board needs to stop spending money on an unnecessary expansion project and focus on making the existing PSB safe for both the existing fire and police departments.

Jim Watt

No Conspiracy

Jim Watt's October Outlook letter contains dismaying falsehoods. Most damaging is the claim that Kensington's fire board directors conspired to force the KPPCSD board to let them build a gigantic new building (housing both police and fire) in Kensington Park (which the KPPCSD owns) by threatening instead to renovate the existing Public Safety Building (which the fire board owns) so as to accommodate only fire and "kick out" the police.

As a director of the fire board, though not speaking for it, I can verify that at no point, publicly or privately, did the fire board conspire to concoct this ruse. Rather, that board voted to drop consideration of a site in the park because the KPPCSD board showed so little interest in it, and the fire board had to move on. The KPPCSD directors listened to a small band of residents, including Mr. Watt, with his evidence-free charges that schoolchildren would be run over by careening fire engines dashing out of Kensington Park road (which is actually 400 feet north of the proposed site).

The fire board has stated it will do what it can to accommodate the police department (if we still have one). But since the PSB was built, many new space and logistic renovation requirements, federal and state, have evolved and were explained by KFPD's architect publicly. These are indeed required by code and approved by the fire chief, contra Mr. Watt; see the article by KFPD directors Stein and Dommer in the October Outlook. Similar modern requirements apply to the police, but Mr. Watt did not disclose this. Each unit is calculated to require prohibitively more space in a renovated PSB than it now occupies.

Kevin Padian, KFPD director

KFPD Celebrates Its Contract

Dear Editor:

The Kensington Fire Protection District (KFPD) announced that it would celebrate the renewal of its contract with the El Cerrito Fire Department (ECFD) with a cake-cutting at its annual Open House on Saturday, October 12. Amid all the controversy around contracting for police services, it's worth examining the benefits of this partnership in light of some of the claims made by opponents of contracting.

Some twenty years ago, the KFPD was in a similar place to where the KPPCSD is today. Costs were high, unsustainable and increasing, and budget reserves were shrinking. The board informed residents of the situation and voted to contract with ECFD. And we've been winning ever since.

What evolved was a mutually beneficial contract where we reap the benefits of a larger, more stable organization and sufficient staff to cover unscheduled absences. The district paid off the CalPERS pension liabilities, enabling the KFPD to put savings aside to purchase a million-dollar fire truck every ten- to twelve years, as required.

Of concern to some at the time, similar to today, was whether we would "lose control" of the department. We did not. The contractor is obligated to maintain staffing levels, recruiting, training, and back-office support. We keep our branding, logo, and identity through uniforms and signage.

Contracting offers a way to contain costs with a larger department. Costs are going up for salaries, retiree benefits, pensions, operating expenses, regardless of contracting. The contractor is motivated to keep its own costs down, so increases must be within bounds for them as well.

One common myth is that we would lose our staff when there are shortages. In fact, the opposite is true. Because you pay for a contract, you are ensuring that you will have staff on hand. Our in-house KPD operation is rarely fully staffed due to sick time, injury, vacation as well as turnover and unpaid leave. As part of a larger department, our officers would be fully supervised at all times.

I applaud the KFPD in celebrating its ongoing working partnership with the El Cerrito Fire Department. It truly is a win-win.

The Voting Ordinance

Dear Editor:

In response to a recent mailing to Kensington residents, more than 350 households (representing over 500 residents) responded in favor of the need to vote on any decision to outsource some or all police services. A big thank-you to those who took the time to respond.

The voting ordinance, filed by following county procedures, requires a vote on this issue, and the response from residents supports this requirement. Even if you don't like an ordinance or think it might be invalid, it is current law and can't simply be ignored.

A vote on a decision as critical to property values and safety of the community is simply part of the democratic process, and the board should welcome the opportunity to let Kensington residents determine how to proceed. Then, however the vote goes, we can put the controversy behind us and focus on supporting whatever path the community chooses.

Meryl Natchez Rafferty

Turnabout Fair Play

Dear Editor:

There seems to be much community concern about the KPPCSD ordinance regarding voter ratification of any contracting of police services.

Hopefully individual members of the board are confident with the wisdom of Kensington voters in selecting themselves for board membership. This same confidence in Kensington voters' wisdom should be extended by the board to ratification of any potential contracting agreement for police services. If the board is unwilling to accept voter review and ratification of any potential contracts, I feel the board is expressing doubt in voters' wisdom in selecting themselves to the board.

Ray Barraza

A Hard Rain

Dear Editor:

Perhaps Kensington residents recall that very brief "rain" we had on Sept. 16 following weeks of a funky dry fog that produced zero moisture. I speak of that preceding fog because it was perplexing. Normally my beautiful redwood trees "fog drip," meaning that the condensation collected in their branches and needles rain down onto the woodland garden below. I don't even have to water!

Yet during this "fog," the ground below was disturbingly bone-dry. My hair, which normally curls in humidity, was straight. Hmm. So what was this stuff?

Then we were told to expect "rain" on the 16th. That of course had me watching the sky, which filled with trails behind planes and created a whiteout by day's end on the 15th. I then noticed the signature microwave cloud pattern that looks a bit like a zebra sky, and decided to put out a glass water catchment container to collect this "rain" and let Basic Lab in Chico tell me what was in it.

The results are back. Measured in ug/l units: Aluminum 49.5, Barium 6.32, and Strontium 10.1. These are the only heavy metals included in Basic Lab's Geoengineering package. I would have liked to include sulphur and glyphosate. Yes, glyphosate has been documented in airplane emissions by scientist Anthony Samsel, who was the first to alert us to glyphosate in vaccines—remember the gelatin petrie dishes that specimens are grown on. Anything made from corn, like bioethanol fuels, can contain glyphosate.

What exactly are these heavy metals doing in our rainwater? Well, aside from the fact that they are a desiccant, which should have our hair standing on end, they also synergistically combine with glyphosate to provide expedient travel right straight to our brain as together they have no trouble crossing the blood/brain barrier. I suggest research for anyone interested in this Pandora's box. It is high time we connect the dots and scream about this! Our lives are utterly dependent on our becoming aware.

On Good Governance

Dear Editor:

It will be twelve years since my arrival in Kensington, my first experience in choosing a small town over a larger city. I loved this village in the hills with its cheek-by-jowl mixture of housing and windy streets, shopkeepers, and Sunday Farmers' Market. And I love it still. Unlike most communities, where governing is more often delegated to elected representatives due to sheer numbers, Kensington's size makes for a true participatory democracy; residents have the opportunity to weigh in more directly on matters deeply affecting us.

And Kensingtonians did weigh in more directly in 2009, when nearly 1,000 signed an ordinance spelling out that there be a vote in the event of any movement toward contracting out our police department. That ordinance was adopted by our then KPPCSD Board in a 4-1 vote. Today, the legitimacy of that ordinance is being questioned—much as we see at the federal level—where treaties and voting rights laws are being broken or shredded—creating pervasive distrust in government.

Good governance requires not only that citizen-residents be active, but that those governing reflect their input, that there be transparency in spending tax funds and in translating plans, regulations and, yes, ordinances into practice. Yet, a request for proposals for contracting out was crafted and sent by the current board without mention of Kensington's 2009 ordinance—disregarding the law.

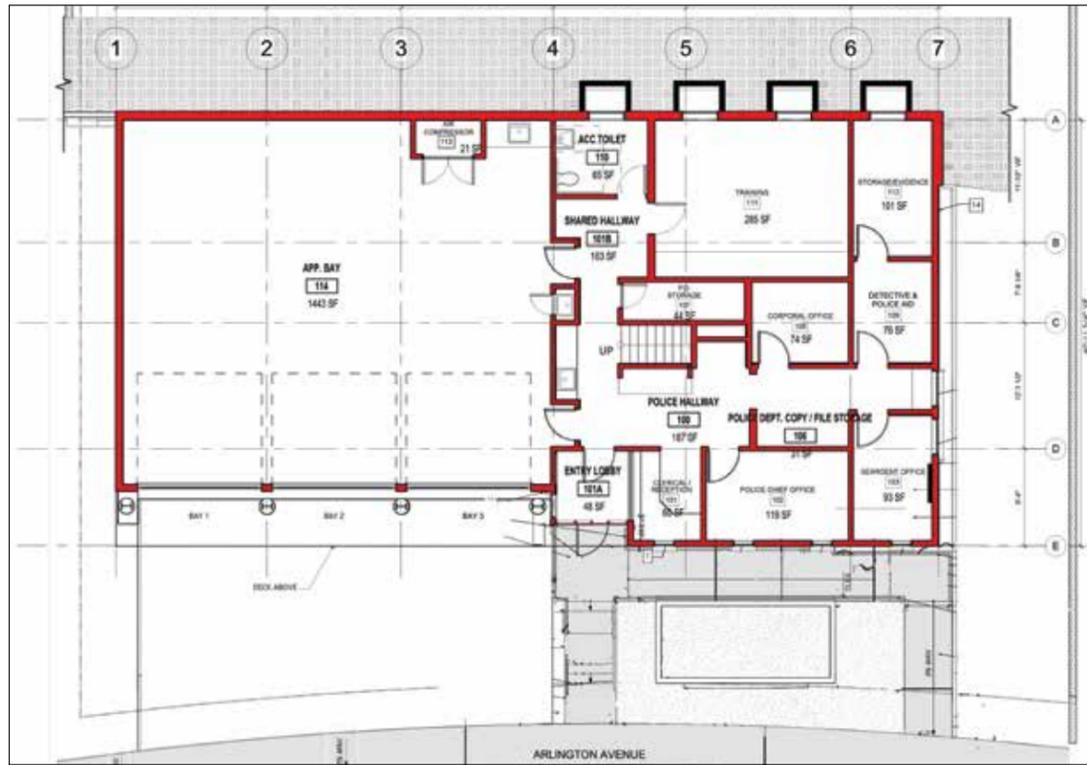

Now, it is time that we vote. Or we turn to the courts.
